MALIBU/LOST HILLS SHERIFF'S STATION COMMUNITY CRIME PREVENTION TIPS

MAY 2016

Planning for Emergencies: A Family Guide

General advice on preparing your family and your community for natural and man-made disasters

- Make sure everyone has basic family phone contact numbers and business or school addresses. Remember that email and text may work when phone circuits are overloaded.
- Identify places to meet both near the house and farther away. Set a priority order about which place to go to, why, and when.
- Establish an out-of-town contact that everyone can call and report to. Make sure the contact agrees, and make sure everyone knows how to dial that long-distance number.
- Keep vehicles in good working order and keep the gas tank at least half full at all times. Remember, if power fails, gas pumps won't work!
- Stockpile a disaster kit in advance and refresh supplies at least every six months. Consider seasonal changes in your family's needs. For example, you might want to have more blankets available in the fall and winter season.
- Know how to turn off safely the water, electricity, and gas that serve your home.
- "What if?" your plan. What if a major roadway is blocked? What if power is out and the car is low on gas? What if mass transit is unavailable? Where will these family members go? How will they communicate that they are safe?

- What local situations in your neighborhood or community might result in evacuation? How should family members pack for this situation? What about care for pets in cases where they cannot be in shelters?
- Find out about plans that link with yours. What plans do children's schools have in place? What plans are in place where you and other adults work? Make sure school and workplace have updated contact information for all members of your family. What are local authorities' plans for your area?
- How might your family work together with neighbors to prepare and survive an emergency? Are there neighbors with special needs? Who could help them? Talk together; share the skills and equipment you could make available to each other. Devise ways you could help each other's families if the need arises. Third, revisit your plan.
- Review the plan as a group every few months. Consider holding family rehearsals or drills if you live in areas where there might be little warning of an emergency.
- Don't forget to update the plan to account for new schools children attend, changes in job locations or employers, and the like.
